

[--[Myth]>-- We don't have to worry about measles in the United States.

[--[Fact]>-- Before the measles vaccine arrived in 1963, nearly everyone in the U.S. had the disease before the end of childhood. On average, 440 children died from measles annually from 1953 to 1963.

[--[Research]>-- Suggests if there were no measles vaccine, we would have at least 4 million cases in the U.S. every year.

GET VACCINATED

GET YOUR FACTS

vaccineswork.org nih.gov cdc.gov historyofvaccines.org aap.org apa.org time.com